

For the second year running 12 LETS members braved the bitterly cold wind to meet for a festive supper at the Avon Brewery. This Portuguese themed restaurant, which also offers standard British favourites, made us very welcome. The food was superb, with both Richard and Alan risking the flames of the chorizo starter – very impressive! Giles introduced us to the delights of Portuguese VINO VERDI which is a new addition to their wine menu – no complaints there! Three members, having been with our Salisbury group since inception, amused us with some anecdotes, our newer members shared their experiences with us and the time just flew by. All agreed it was a very enjoyable evening.

Networking is so much easier when you're face to face, which is why social gatherings are such a good idea.

Would it be a good idea to organise something similar in the summer?
